Prom a Translation in the Boston Herald.)

We hastened along the second corridor, and found ourselves in the room, where the only furniture was a single stool. It was on this seat that the last tollet of the condemned man was to be made. As we entered by one door a man in a dress coat and a white necktie came out of another, and advanced to meet us with a grave and measured step. He looked like a diplomat or a clergyman, but he was the executioner. He was followed by a little old man in a black frock coat, the first assistant of M. de Paris, the executioner of Beauvisa. This old man held in his hand a leather bag. Troppmann stood motionlass in front of the stool; we had stopped at the same time and formed a group around him. The executioner and his assistant were standing on the right; next to them was the priest. The commandant and Clauds were on the left of the prisoner. The old man opened his bag with a key and drew out several white straps with buckies; he knelt down with some difficulty behind Troppmann and began to fasten his feet. The condemned man had involuntarily placed his foot on one of the straps; the old man tried to remove it, and then said, "Pardon me, sir," touching Troppmann on the call to attract his aftention. The prisoner turned round and with a polite nod raised his foot and fet the strap go. During this time the priest was reading in a low tone from a prayer-book in the French language. The two other assistants of the executioner hurriedly removed the strait-jucket, took hold of Troppmann's arms and fastened them, with the hands crossed behind his back, and surrounded his whole body with straps. M. de Faris giving his instructions by pointing with his finger from left to right.

At last, when this operation—during which, I confess, my face was bathed in a cold perspiration—was completed, a new one began. Troppmann was requested to take a seat on the stool, and the gouty old man began to cut his hair. He first took out a small pair of seissors, and, with many grimaces of the mouth, careful Manchester and the counties of Henrico, Manchester and the counties of Henrico, Goochland, Chesterfield, New Kent, Hanover, and King William will be held at the Ballard House, in this city, at 12 M. on the 30th instant, to nominate a member of Congress. tion to the hair. He placed one swollen hand on the head of the young man, who bent forward submissively, and cut with the other. The tutts of dark hair slipped over the shoulders and fell to the ground. over the shoulders and fell to the ground. One curl rolled to my feet. Troppmann kept his head bent forward resignedly, and the priest said his prayers still more slowly. I could not take my eyes off the hands of the condemned man; hands reddened with blood and now lying, one on the other, powerless. My eyes wandered to the white and delicate neck, a neck like that of a time, and expressed themselves highly de-lighted with the trip. They are par-ticularly loud in their praise of the managers of the Occan View, who ex-tended to them every helity for ma-king the encampment a success, On Wednesday last the Norfolk Blues, under Cantain Gilmer spent the day with the and delicate neck, a neck like that of a child, and involentarily my imagination chi'd, and involentarily my imagination drew a transverse line on it. There, thought I, there in a few minutes the heavy axe will pass, tearing the vertebræ, cutting the muscles and nerves. This body did not seem to wait its destiny, it was so white, so full of life, and, in spite of myself. I wondered what that bent head was thinking about at that moment. Was it thinking, with clinehed teeth, "No, I will not show any weakness"? Perhaps it was watching a whirlwind of insignificant souvenirs pass through it. Perhaps it saw the convulsive agony of some of the victims of the murder about to be expinted. Perhaps that head was saying to itself: "This is Wednesday last the Norfolk Blues, under Captain Gilmer, spent the day with the Howitzers, and in the afternoon the two companies had a friendly target-practice. The target consisted of a barrel anchored about 800 yards from the shore. The Blues went to the guns first, and did some most excellent firing, Sergeant Broughton making the best shot, and very nearly striking the target, receiving the cheers of the crowd. The Howitzers then took charge of the guns, and the fifth shot, which was made by Sergeant J. C. Chappell, carried away the target, and was heartily applauded by those present.

The firing was witnessed by shout twelve by those present.

The firing was witnessed by shout twelve hundred people, who were delighted with the evening's entertainment. After the firing, the balance of the evening was spent. nothing to what we shall see presently."
And it will repeat that until death seizes upon it. The old man sill cut away; the seissors could be heard severing the hair; presently the old man finished, and Troppmann got up and shook his head. Generally at this moment the condemned men who are still strong enough to speak make their last requests to the governor of the prison, give him any money they may have left, asking him to pay their debts; they thank their keepers, and request some in dancing and other enjoyments. The Blues returned to Norfolk about 11 o'clock at night.
All things considered, the encampment THE EXTRA SESSION. over his shoulders, and the executioner took hold of the rope. "Come, Troppmann," said M. Claude in the midst of a sepulchral silence, "the last moment has come; in a few minutes all will be finished. Do you still persist in asserting that you had accompliess?" "Yes, sir, I persist," answered Troppmann, and his pleasant baritone voice had not altered. The condemned man accompanied these words with a slight nod, as if it was with regret that he did not answer differently in order to please his questioner, "Well, let us go," said Claude.

We went out into the large court-vard of the prison. It was 6:45 o'ciock. The sky was hardly lit up; a fog filled the air and veiled everything. The howling of the legislation.

As to the two electoral tickets, General Wickham stated that he knew nothing of the Lewis-Riddleberger scheme; that that (caving the Straightouts two electors) would not be satisfactory to him; that he thought was hardly lit up; a log filled the air and veiled everything. The howling of the mob deafened us. It was an interminable, noisy, and insupportable hooting, which fell upon us before we had hardly crossed the threshold. Our party had again grown smaller, and as we hastened toward the gate some remained behind. I myself as I walked with the others felt a strong inclination to do the same. Transmann ad-can hardly be altered without being injured.

The building is now a beautiful one, and can hardly be altered without being injured.

Time is now given for the Government people to think if it would not be better to leave it alone, and erect a United States court-house and custom-house here instead. Take out the courts and internal-revenue offices and customs officers and put in an elevator and the post-office would have plenty of room.

The present court-room is a miserable failure so far as acoustics are concerned, and a new court-house would necessarily be an improvement.

The Senate bill proposed to appropriate $100,000 to enlarge this building. With that sum and a little more a very good fireproof house could be erected sufficient for the courts and revenue and customs office, &c., &c.

gate some remained behind. I myself as I walked with the others felt a strong inclination to do the same. Troppmann advanced rapidly, dragging his feet, for the straps impeded his steps. How small he seemed to me—how young—almost a child. All at once, slowly like a throat spreading its jaws, the gate opened in front of us; a cry of satisfaction burst froat the crowd, and the monster which was waiting for its prey presented itself to our sight, with its two uprights and its kinfe in the air. A glacial cold penetrated us—a cold which made me feel sick at heart—and I felt my legs giving way under me. However, I watched Troppmann: he drew back, threw back his head, his knees gave way as though he had received a blow on the chest. "He is going to faint," said a voice near me. But he at once recovered himself, and walked forward with a firm step. Those who wished to see how the head would fall preceded him, running. I had not the courage; my heart gave way: I stopped near the gate. I saw the executioner suddenly appear on the left side of the guillotine. I saw how Troppmanu, separating from the group of invited spectators, whom he left below, went up the steps—there were ten of them—I saw how he stopped and cast a glance backward; I heard him pronounce these words, "Tell M. Claude—" I saw him on the platform; I saw how two men seized him on the right and left as spiders seize a fly; I saw how he advanced, head foremost, and how his feet moved. But then I turned away and waited; he ground swam under me. It seemed as though I had to wait a whole cternity. I had had the time to notice that on the appearance of Troppmann the shout of the crowd had burst nomination.

I can assure you that I am much pleased with your kind offers of support and assistance, and I hope and expect that a hearty and organized effort for the success of the cause in which we are so much interested will bring in November next the victory for which we have so long watched and watch. Yours sincerely.

followed. In front of me stood a sentinel, a young fellow with rosy checks and robust figure. I saw that he was staring at me with a frightened and stupid perplexity, and I said to myself: "Here is a soldier, born in some distant village, the child of an honest family. What are they showing him here?" At last I head a light blow, the sound of two pieces of wood striking together; it was the upper semi-circle of the collar which holds the head of the condemned man motionless which had faller into its place. Then I heard a deep roaring, something rolled noisily and gave forth a gushing sound. You might have thought it some powerful animal which had just relieved itself by a sudden vomit. I can find waited. Yours sincerely, GROVER CLEVELAND. Extensive improvements are now being made to this building. That portion over the offices now occupied by John H. Arrest of an Alleged Watch-Thief.
Yesterday a white man named McQuade went into Ellis Abran's pawn-office, on Broad street, and wanted to get a loan on an open-face gold watch, with English patent lever. Mr. Abram took the watch, and upon looking at it saw that the number corresponded with that of a watch which had been stolen. He engaged the attention of McQuade until he could send for a policeman. In a short time Officer Poilieux came in, and Mr. Abram told him that the man had a stolen watch and wanted to get money on it.

McQuade said that the watch had just been given to him by a man who requested him to take it to Mr. Abram and pawn it. McQuade was arrested and locked up in the Second police-station. His case will be considered by the Police Justice this morning. The number of the watch if 4,008. Mr. Abram could not tell the name of the owner, but he entered the number in his book some weeks ago, when the owner called at his office to know whether or not any one had offered to pawn such a watch with him. SEEKING SANITARY MEASURES. Talk About Garbage and Sewer Deposits

These Subjects-Colonel W. P. Craighill A called meeting of the Council was held A called meeting of the Council was held vesterday evening at 6 o'clock. Present, Mr. J. Taylor Ellyson, president, and the following members: Messrs. Bahen, Cabell, Campbell, Curtis, Frischkorn, Guy, Hargrove, Hughes, Jones, King, Lewis, Parater, Pearman. Pizzini, Redford, Riddell, Robinson, and Turpin.

The president stated that the Council had been called at the request of the Committee on Health, and zsked for the REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE, which was read as follows:

"The series of resolutions in relation to the sanitary condition of our city referred to this committee by the Common Council have received that consideration which the importance of the subject demands, and we respectfully submit the following report. cmbodying our views as to what action should be had in the premises by your honorable body:

"The condition of our streets and alleys at this time is such that, with the use of the hands and carts of the street, department at this time is such that, with the use of the hands and carts of the street, department for the period of about three weeks, under the direction of the president of the Board of Health, they can be put in a state of cleanliness that will be satisfactory.

"In relation to the system of inspection, flushing of eniverts, and disinfection, the president of the Board of Health has ample means and authority for the present ple means and authority for the present, and he will see that everything that is essen-tial in this respect shall be done.

"One of the series of resolutions referred proposes that the street-basins and culverts should be cleaned between the hours of sunset and sunrise. Whenever this work is done in the summer months this would be almost impracticable, as it would neces-sitate the work being done in the nightsitate the work being done in the nighttime. Under the present system, when a basin is cleansed the contents are disinfected as soon as brought to the surface and immediately hauled away, so that you will readily perceive that with these precautionary measures disease is not likely to arise from this source.

"We respectfully request the adoption of the following resolution to carry out the recommendation as contained in the first part of our report:

recommendation as contained in the first part of our report:
"Resolved, That the City Engineer be, and is hereby, authorized to transfer to the president of the Board of Health the bands and carts of the street department, for service in the health department, for the period of three weeks, or so much of the time as the president of the Board of Health may deem necessary, for the pur-pose of cleaning the streets and alleys of the city." the city."

Dr. Cabell was permitted to address the Council, and spoke for a few minutes.

On motion of Mr. Campbell an amendment to the report was adopted, whereby the expense incurred will be charged to the health department.

CLEANSE CULVERTS AT NIGHT. Mr. Turpin offered the following: " Resolved (the Board of Aldermen con curring). That the sewers, whenever pos-sible, shall be cleansed during the night-time, and the contents removed before dawn."

Adopted by the following vote:
Alecs.—Messrs. Frischkorn, Guy, Hargrove, Jones, Parater, Pearman Pizzini,

MORE MONEY FOR HEALTH. The following, offered by Dr. Riddell, on motion of Mr. Pizzini was referred to the Committee on Finance:

"Resolved by the Common Council (the Board of Aldermen concurring). That the sum of $12,000 be appropriated, to be expended by the Board of Health, for the purpose of putting the city in a proper sanitary condition.

"Resolved further, That $5,000 be appropriated, to be expended by the Board of Health in the establishment of a hospital, if such be necessary."

pital, if such be necessary." REMOVE THE GARBAGE OFTENER, Dr. Riddell offered the following, which was referred to the Committee on Health:

"That the Board of Health be instructed to have the garbage removed from the various parts of the city at least three times to employ additional force in order that the city may be put in a thorough santary condition as expeditionaly as possible." Dr. Riddell stated that it would take the savenger six weeks to remove the garbage that had already accumulated.

Mr. Frischkorn offered a petition from the tax-payers of Jefferson Ward to open M street from Twenty-second to Twenty-third.

Referred to the Street Committee. COLONEL CRAIGHILL. Mr. Cabell offered the following, which was adopted: Whereas Colonel William P. Craighill

2. Be it resolved. That we will extend to his successor, Colonel Haines, the same cordial cooperation on the part of this body, and that we will endeavor, as far as lies in our power, to aid him in prosecuting the enlarged plan of bringing ocean-going vessels of 25-feet draft to Richmond—a work of great and national invocators. of great and national importance, which Congress at its last session inaugurated. Board of Aldermon.

As soon as the Common Council adjourned the Board of Aldermen met, Mr. L. L. Bass in the chair, and the following members present: Messrs, Adams, Barksdale, Burwell, Cabell, Crenshaw, Crump, Dickerson, Glasgow, Page, and Taylor.

The clerk read the minutes of the last meeting, and they were duly signed by the president.

The clerk read the call for the meeting.

The clerk read the call for the meeting, which was the same as that read to the Common Council. The clerk read the report of the Board of Health, the same as read before the Com-mon Council, together with the amend-

Mr. Page asked for the reading of the resolutions (herotofore published) to which the report of the Board of Health was immediately responsive. The clerk read the resolutions which caused the report of the Board of Health and the meeting and action of the Common Council. tion of the Common Council.

The Board not understanding this, the clerk again read the report of the Health Committee, and the report was adopted.

Dr. Cabell opposed Mr. Turpin's Common Council resolution passed by the other branch, calling for the cleaning of the sewers at night.

Messrs. Barksdale, Glasgow, and Dickerson opposed the resolution, and it was defeated. feated.

On motion of Mr. Page, the hands were required to remove matter from the sewers and place it immediately in carts.

The Crsighili-Haines complimentary resolutions were adopted.
